Marula is a fruit tree native to Africa that can reach 7 to 18 m tall. It is nicknamed the elephant tree because elephants love its fruit! The fruit of the Marula has a yellow skin, white flesh and a large kernel that is very rich in vitamin C and protein. After drying the kernel of the fruit, you can collect the almonds inside which will make the oil. Marula oil is 10 times more resistant to oxidation than olive oil and is one of the most stable natural oils in the world. The content of Vitamin C is four times higher in the fruit of the marula compared to that of an orange.

For facial use simply plop a few drops of Marula Oil on your fingers and gently dab the oil on your face. For hair care Marula Oil can also be used directly on the scalp, on split ends or simply to give a beautiful natural shine to the whole hair, even when heat styling.
